

SOUTH CAROLINIAN'S YARN ABOUT A HORSE DEAL

The Nag Survived the Swapping Process, Was Won Back and May Even Live to Supply Excitement in Another Transaction.

"You don't have any fun swappin' and tellin' horses up here," remarked a South Carolinian the other day in an uptown horse exchange.

"We don't, eh?" was the response. "Why, you folks down there never sell a mare for $3,000 like the one that was handed over just now. And $3,000 is cheap here."

"It's not the money that makes the sport," answered the other. "Did you ever know a man to buy a plug for $2,000? Well, I did. And did you ever know the man to sell the same plug for $5,75? No? Nearly $3 profit! Think of it! When folks get to charmin' these fancer prices, as you do here, then all the fun's out of it. Give me my old market town for real good sport in the horse tradin' business."

"Let me tell you about a deal I made last year. I wouldn't have missed that deal for all your thousand dollar fives. No, sir! I had a sorrel mare; a big, lumbering old thing. She'd been a good horse in her day, but that was some eighteen years ago, and when last fall came round she'd been fallin' away for two or three seasons, till she was bony off. I reckon she was 'bout the worst horse in the county, but somehow she'd been about the farm so long that I hated to swap her off. However, seem she was likely to die any day, my wife and I concluded it was best, and as I was always rather much on a swap, I didn't have any doubt but what I'd turn out O. K."

"You know we farmers have to ride a long way to get to market town down south. Well, I wanted to take the old mare to town for swappin', but I knew I could half finish her up to walk there, seen it was some twenty miles off. She hadn't been out of the stable for a long bit, and, to tell the truth, she was hardly able to get her forefeet over the log at the bottom of the stable door. Such bein' so, I reckoned I'd lead her to town pretty slow a day ahead of time, so she'd look kind of fresh when time came to swap."

"The night before market day—it was Saturday we went to town generally—I got on another horse and rode in, leadin' the old mare by the halter. We didn't get out of a walk, but she was clean winded when we reached the edge of town. I gave her a lot of oats out of a bag I'd brought to bolster her up. Then I tied her and the other nag to a tree, and the three of us slept till mornin', after which we started into town just as though we'd come straight from home."

"Now, the very first man I met was a fellow from my neighborhood. We said how d're we to each other, and he looked at the mugs.

"Gee," he said. "I didn't know that old thing could travel to town and keep goin' so good."

"Get off!" said I. "She's as good as she was ten years ago."

"He seemed mighty surprised. We rode to the main street and stopped at the grocery store, and pretty soon horse swappin' began. One fellow said he'd take my mare for an old cow he had at home; another fellow said he'd give a cow and bird dog together for her; another said he'd give one better and make it two bird dogs. Everybody seemed to want my mare, but I said I couldn't part with her."

"She's worth at least $12," I said to 'em. "She would be worth fifteen, but age takes down prices on horses."

"Toward ev'nin', though, I took up an offer. A fellow named Smith—a cheeky youngster that thought nobody could beat him things about swappin' plugs—said he'd give me a cow, a big sow and eight little pigs for the mare. 'It's a go,' I said, and he took off the sorrel, leadin' her by the halter.

"Well, the youngster took the mare home. When he got there—I heard afterward—she was pretty near gone up. I reckon he said nice things about me. But he couldn't go back on the swap. Half the farmers in the county had heard of the bargain, so he just had to cough up the cow and the big sow and the eight little pigs. He was so mad that he didn't bring 'em over to my place himself, but sent a man with 'em. It was the man that told me how mad Smith was. He said Smith was ravin' all over—mad enough to chew up tempestually and not feel 'em. He didn't say, though, that the cow—a fine lookin' beast—was goin' to die in two hours, and he didn't say the sow and the pigs were goin' to die, either."

"It wasn't long after the man left that the cow fell on the ground and rolled over and moaned. Then she died. Before the day was gone the sow was dead, too, and all of the pigs—except one. By the way, I never did understand why that last pig didn't go out. He must have had a cast iron stomach."

"What was the matter with all of them?" asked an old habitue of the exchange.

"Now, didn't I tell you how you folks up here didn't know anything about horse swappin'?" answered the South Carolinian. "What was the matter with 'em? Why, Smith had poisoned the whole bunch—to get even. I knew it when I saw 'em dyin'. As soon as they were dead I sent to the doctor's, two miles away, and told him to come over and make an autopsy. He found enough—"

"He found the poison and sign up a paper to that effect. A few months later I went to law. Smith was in court. He hadn't got over his madness yet, and the looks he gave me would have froze you fellows, because you ain't used to the discomforts of genuine, orthodox horse swappin'."

"And the outcome of it all was that the jury made Smith give me $10 damages and the old mare into the bargain. She's livin' yet, and I don't know but I'll swap her off again."—New York Times.

Living Rooms.

The proper temperature for living rooms in good health is 68 to 70 degrees, but invalids and aged people may require more heat, sometimes as much as 80 degrees, but children and infants should not be kept in an atmosphere above 70 degrees. Sleeping room temperatures should not rise above 65 degrees, preferably 60 degrees, except where illness or special causes require a modification of the rule.

Nervous Men and Women

"Oh, you nervous people, take Johann Hoff's Malt Extract. It makes strong nerves and clear heads."

EISNER AND MENDELSON COMPANY, NEW YORK, SOLE AGENTS

TAKING medicine to cure nervousness seldom has good results.

Stimulants are the worst things in the world, for they excite and never help.

To really help the nerves you have to begin with the stomach and see that the food is properly assimilated, and when you do that it is wonderful how quickly the nerves quiet down.

Nervousness upsets the stomach so that the food is not properly digested, the results react upon the nerves back to the stomach again, and so the endless chain goes on.

The genuine Johann Hoff's Malt Extract comes to the relief of the nerves by regulating the digestion.

It has been doing this for half a century and is the surest and safest help for a disordered digestion and a run-down condition of the nerves.

PROF. PIETRA SANTA, of Paris, writes:

"As a large number of patients lack the necessary power to digest solid food and would, through the use of stimulants, be merely excited and weak ended, therefore, I regard it of immense value to the practitioner to bring to his aid a nutritious tonic and remedy like Johann Hoff's Malt Extract which will act not only as a tonic, but as a nutritive as well, and which is less exciting than wine as a stimulant."

It is JOHANN HOFF'S that does such magnificent work.

store a great deal, and no matter where I may be riding on a street car, walking or in one of the numerous places of business which I frequent—when an idea occurs to me that requires my attention I put a memorandum of it down on a post card, address it to myself and drop it in the nearest letter box. Some days I will send a dozen postal cards to myself, and the next morning they are on my desk awaiting me. I have been doing this for two or three years, and I think it's a pretty good system."

A Hard Question.

When I was quite a lad, long before I became a preacher, I had some very difficult questions put to me, one especially so, as I considered it. The Sunday school was rather a new thing in the section where I lived, and it put a great many to asking and answering questions. A little girl came to me one day as to a mission of great importance and began to ask me with questions, I answering them, I can't say the best I could. She asked me who made the, why God made me and a number of other questions, and then, pausing for a while as if in a deep study, she said, "Why did God make you so ugly?"

That was a very hard question for me, I was obliged to ask for time and have never answered it yet.—Hemiletic Review.

A Legal Wreck.

William A. Sutherland of Rochester told this story at his own expense: When he was a candidate for attorney general of New York, special attention was given to getting a big vote in the City of Flowers. Large placards were displayed reading:

Vote for
WILLIAM A. SUTHERLAND
for Attorney General.

During one week of the campaign a theatrical company played "A Legal Wreck" in Rochester. In some way Mr. Sutherland's posters and the theatrical posters got so mixed up that one of them read:

Vote for
WILLIAM A. SUTHERLAND,
"A Legal Wreck."

He Got the Pin.

Something glittered in the mud in the city's crowded street. It was a pin. "See a pin and pick it up, and all day long you'll have good luck," muttered Jephson as he started out to get the pin. He had learned that old saying when quite a child. As he bent down to reach the pin, his hat fell off and rolled under a cab wheel. His eyeglasses also fell and broke on the hard road. A bus caught him on one side and a barker's van on the other, the two nearly squeezing the life out of him. In making a dash for the pavement he upset a cyclist who at that moment was wheeling round the far side of a car. Altogether it was a great adventure, but he had got the pin.—London Answers.

Jones—Why haven't you been around? You've been promising to call for more than a year. Come, now, say when you will come.

Johnson—Fact is I'm so busy that I can't say when.

Jones—Nonsense! By the way, my daughter is going to take piano lessons; going to begin next week.

Johnson—I'll call tonight.—Boston Transcript.

DENTING A PROTEST.

A New York Editor on the Use of "Like" for "As If."

A precious young reader of The Evening Telegram writes all protestingly: "My best friend is a swindler. A competent attorney has just employed some investigators which, he declares, show that in three years the Bank of England has lost tens of millions of dollars to swindlers."

"This reads like it belonged," etc., and says our young reader:

"I wish to protest against the use of 'like' for 'as if.'

All right, son. Protest away. This is a free country, and the protest does us good. We appreciate humor in the young, even though it occasionally approaches pettiness. And the protest can surely do you no harm, because you have taken the precaution to retire behind the safe and unswindling "X." We trust the cross-mark does not represent the extent of your chirographic ability, though we ourselves do not know how otherwise to account for the peculiarity of signature."

Years ago, son—long before you were taking your pen in hand—the writing men settled the question which you so thoughtfully resurrect. They came to the conclusion that what was universal usage was good usage, or would become so in time. So that today, when one raises the point that, for example, "May the best boat (or the two) win" is incorrect, one becomes an object of pity more than of blame.

The language spoken by the best speakers and written by the best writers, dear little playmate, is the language that endures, as you will appreciate as you grow older and broader.

To come right down to brass tacks, please do not call us on this phrase; we have warrant for it; really we have. What is there you don't like about "like" as a substitute for "as if?" The dictionary goes even think pretty well of it. They give it—the moderns among them—without fear of being scolded by precious little unknown quantities, which we believe is what "X" sometimes stands for. J. S. Mosby liked it. In his "War Reminiscences" he said, "I felt like my final hour had come." Write him a letter, son, and tell him he should have felt "as if" his final hour had come.

Shakespeare didn't hesitate to go counter to your protest. Ever read "A Midsummer Night's Dream"? Then, of course, you are familiar with the line, "But, like, in sickness, did I loathe this food." Ask Mrs. Peter if she'll communicate to William your idea that he should have written "as if in sickness."

Come a little further with us, little friend. Hear also what Lowell says in his introduction to the "Bleeding Papers."

"Like" for "as if" has on its side the authority of two kings—Henry VIII. and Charles I. These were ample without fear of being scolded by precious little unknown quantities, which we believe is what "X" sometimes stands for.

Always glad to hear from you. Seems like (that) we were living our childhood over again.—New York Telegram.

FAULT FOUND WITH AMERICANS.

Government Officials Think Our Marines Should Have Prevented Invasion of City—Two Rebel Generals Reported Drowned.

Colon, Nov. 22.—Generals Patino and Cortissoz, who were respectively first and second in command of the attacking insurgent force, left Gatun, which is six miles from here, on Tuesday evening in a small boat for this port. It was a very dark night, and their boat capsized in the river. General Patino, who was wounded in one arm, endeavored to save General Cortissoz, who could not swim, and both men were drowned. The deaths of these two leaders are regarded as a great blow to the Liberal party. Quiet prevails here, and the revolutionary troops are behaving in an orderly manner. Marines from the Mochicas are still ashore, and they are guarding the railroad property. They are not interfering in any way with the new local government.

The following provisional appointments have been made by the Liberals: Senor Esperedella, to be prefect; Dr. Valverde, to be mayor; Dr. Franco, to be postmaster, and Senor Silva, to be captain of the port. Other minor appointments were also filled.

Treasury Safe Opened.
The treasury safe was opened in the presence of witnesses. It was found to contain 1,080 Colombian dollars, equivalent to $456 gold. The former postmaster also handed over to the Liberals the cash and the postage stamps in his possession.

It is said the gunboat Marietta, which sailed from Key West for Colon Nov. 18, has been sighted.

The government at Panama is still busy erecting breastworks in the vicinity of the railroad property in the direction of which the Liberal attack is expected.

The mayor of Panama started in a launch belonging to the canal company Wednesday morning to report the state of affairs to General Albian. Since the mayor's return to Panama it has become rumored that he found the general at Chorrera and that he decided to take his forces back to Panama by land and re-enters the garrison there. No immediate attack on Panama is contemplated. Colonel Barrera is awaiting the arrival at Colon of the Liberal chief Domingo Diaz in a day or two. When Diaz reaches this city, definite plans will be formulated. General Sarmiento commands the government forces at Panama.

Political Prisoners Removed.

The political prisoners at Panama have been removed from their usual prison to a safer place of confinement at the farther end of Panama.

United States Consul General Hezekiah A. Guder, Captain Perry of the United States battleship Iowa and the secretaries of the government held a conference at Panama yesterday. The latter said that the conductors of the trains should not have allowed armed Liberals to embark on the train at Las Cascadas. Captain Perry replied that the government should protect free transit on the isthmus and ought to have prevented the embarkation of the Liberals. Subsequently a letter was sent to the Colombian authorities by the American officials with reference to future action. It is not improbable that the Iowa will shortly land a force to protect transit.

Congressman Resigns.

New York, Nov. 22.—Representative Nicholas Muller of the Seventh New York district has tendered his resignation as member of congress. Mr. Muller, who is the Democratic leader in Richmond borough and who was defeated for the office of president of the borough of Richmond at the city election, says his step is the result of ill health. Although not confined to his home, he has for some time felt himself no longer able to perform his duties in congress and therefore resigns. A special election will have to be held to choose his successor.

Twenty-nine Bodies Found.

Telluride, Colo., Nov. 22.—The number of victims of the terrible disaster in the Smuggler-Union mine is now known to be at least twenty-nine, with a considerable portion of the mine yet unexplored. Besides the twenty-two bodies taken out and identified Wednesday night seven were located yesterday afternoon in the north end of the ninth level, but the gas is still too strong to permit the rescuers to reach them, and their identity is as yet unknown. Several members of the searching parties were overcome in their efforts to bring out the bodies.

Twenty-two Cases of Smallpox.

Buffalo, Nov. 22.—Twenty-two cases of smallpox have developed in this city during the last ten days, and the health department officials are making strenuous efforts to stamp out the disease. All the cases are confined to a section of the east side occupied by Poles. The district is crowded, from two to ten families occupying a single house, thereby exposing a large number of persons to infection.

Twenty-two, Foot Lead Vein.

Knoxville, Tenn., Nov. 22.—Near Friendsville, Tenn., on the Atlanta, Knoxville and Northern railway, Captain T. M. Crawford, an Ohio prospector, has uncovered a vein of lead ore twenty-two feet in thickness and of an undetermined depth. The vein has been traced along the side of a mountain for half a mile and is only six inches below the surface at places.

LYNCH ELECTED AN M. P.

Fought For Boers and Will Be Arrested If He Appears in Commons.
Dublin, Nov. 22.—Colonel Lynch was elected to parliament in the voting in Galway, the result of which was made known last night. Colonel Lynch formerly commanded a force in the Boer army, and it is said that if he appears to take his seat he will be arrested and sent to South Africa to stand trial for treason.

The result of the election was as follows: Lynch, 1,247; Plunkett, 173. On the whole the polling was conducted with comparative orderliness. A large additional force of police prevented numerous street scrumming, which were the outcome of drunkenness, from developing seriously.

In the event of Colonel Lynch's election being quashed on the ground that he is a traitor Mr. Plunkett says he will decline to take the seat thus reverting to him. Lynch's friends seem satisfied he will attempt to take the seat.

NEW HAVEN ROAD STRIKE.

Neither Side Seems Disposed to Yield.

New York, Nov. 22.—The strike of the switchmen in the local yards of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, instead of being settled, as was hoped early yesterday, extended to many other heavy shipping points.

The first train of freight to leave the Willis avenue yards left this morning shortly after 1:30 o'clock. It consisted of fifty cars of general merchandise. There was no report on the part of the strikers to stop it. Passenger service went on last night uninterrupted.

In the five yards at New Haven the men walked out at 3 a. m., and only one train was moved during the day. Congestion similar to that which prevailed in the yards and on the piers here since Tuesday is reported from various places.

Neither side to the trouble shows any signs of yielding.

General Reyes Noncommittal.

Ojinaga, Mexico, Nov. 22.—General Rafael Reyes of Colombia while on board a train between Fortin and Ojinaga, on the Vera Cruz railway, in company with the other delegates to the pan-American conference, was shown the dispatch announcing the taking of Colon by the Colombian Liberals. Without attempting to minimize the importance of the news General Reyes said that the latest turn of affairs might prove to have been trap laid by General Albian to catch the insurgents. When asked whether he would accept the presidency of Colombia and whether the Liberal success would cause any change in his plans, he said, "I prefer not to say whether I will accept the presidency or not until I have conferred with General Ospina and General Holguin upon my return to the City of Mexico."

Insolvent Bank Will Pay All.

Boston, Nov. 22.—An important step toward the settlement of the Globe bank affairs was accomplished when six directors of the bank paid over to Receiver Wing $240,000 in cash in full settlement of the claims that the bank held against them. This payment will place Mr. Wing in a position to pay another dividend of 10 per cent, or $250,000. The comptroller will probably authorize the payment of the dividend immediately. This 10 per cent will make a total of 90 per cent already paid, and the remaining assets will yield sufficient to pay the depositors in full and give the stockholders a dividend.

The conspiracy is said to be dead owing to the publication of its secrets.

Chinese Exclusion Convention.

San Francisco, Nov. 22.—A state convention of 1,500 delegates from all parts of the state has assembled in this city to inaugurate a movement in favor of the re-enactment by congress of the present Chinese exclusion law, which will expire next May. Former Congressman T. J. Geary, the author of the present restriction act, is chairman of the convention. The principal result of the convention will be the adoption of a memorial to congress urging the re-enactment of the present law without modification and the appointment of a delegation to do propaganda work in the east.

Rats Free From Tetanus.

Camden, N. J., Nov. 22.—The white rats which were inoculated with vaccine virus last Monday for the purpose of ascertaining whether the virus contained tetanus germs have come through the seventy-two hours' test period without developing any symptoms of lockjaw. The experiment will be continued along several lines, and a report will be made to the board of health at an early date by the county physician. The investigation was started at the instance of the board as a result of the development of nine cases of lockjaw following vaccination. Of the nine cases seven of the victims died.

Women Lawyers in Maryland.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 22.—Chief Judge McSherry has decided in the case of Miss Etta Maddox that a woman could not take the examination to be admitted to the bar of Maryland. The court says that there is at present no law authorizing such examination, but that it is within the province of the legislature to pass an act authorizing women to take the examination and be admitted to the bar of Maryland. Miss Maddox has applied to take the examination.

Mr. Conger Protests.

London, Nov. 22.—"Mr. Conger, United States minister in Peking, has protested against a concession which the Canton vicegerency has granted to a French company for an electric railway from Canton to Wuchau," says the Shanghai correspondent of The Times. "On the ground that it violates Wu Sung-fang's contracts with the American syndicate which has the concession for the Canton-Hankow line."

Spanish Deputy Shot.

London, Nov. 22.—According to a dispatch to The Daily Express from Madrid, as Senor Romeo, a journalist, was leaving the chamber of deputies on Wednesday he was fired at by three men. He received two bullets in the head and is dying.

THE YUKON CONSPIRACY

Alleged Confirmation of a Probable Fairy Tale.

ORDER OF THE MIDNIGHT SUN.

Its Fifteen Hundred Members Would Overthrow Canadian Supremacy for Nineteen Reasons—Foiled by Publicity.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 22.—The Evening Times of Seattle publishes a story which is offered as confirmation of the story published in the San Francisco Call to the effect that a conspiracy had been planned covering the entire Northwest Territories for the overthrow of Canadian rule and the establishment of an independent republic.

The Times in its article lays great stress on the story obtained from Fred Clark, formerly a stage driver in this city, but who has been in the Yukon for some time, who admits a knowledge of the Order of the Midnight Sun, which is supposed to have been organized for the sole purpose of rebellion.

It is claimed that the order was originally organized in strict secrecy in Dawson in 1900 and from there spread along the Yukon, with branches as far as Circle City on one hand and to Skagway and Atlin in the other directions.

It is claimed that men came to Seattle in the interests of the uprising and solicited support in the way of financial contributions. The Times says that no arms were bought. The total membership of the Order of the Midnight Sun is placed at 1,500, although the members confidently expected outside assistance that would bring the total of the army of insurrection to almost 9,000.

Nineteen Reasons For Rebellion.

The Times says that in the early days of the organization a circular was issued and secretly distributed to disaffected miners on the upper Yukon in which nineteen different clauses were given as being reasons for an uprising. These dealt with defective mining laws, corruption of officials, royalty, liquor traffic and gambling, delays in the court, British Columbia, alien act duties, miners and loggers' license, regarding fees and boundary disputes.

A similar circular was handed to business men of Skagway in which they were solicited to aid for support of the enterprise, and for a time Clark made his headquarters at the latter place, conducting a junta in the order. The plotters, according to the Times, anticipated no trouble in getting together men enough to overpower the mounted police at different towns of the interior. The raid was to be started on the b. r. d. and as fast as a town was overpowered a revolutionary government was to be installed. Local officials were to be seized and held as hostages.

The raid was to be started immediately after the close of navigation and the telegraph lines to Dawson were to be cut in a dozen different places. The leaders are said to have believed that the Canadian government would be months in getting men and that at last it would have been compelled to make terms with the insurgents before they laid down their arms.

The conspiracy is said to be dead owing to the publication of its secrets.

Long Terms For Burglars.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 22.—Lawyer John L. Semple of Baltimore, N. J., who is on trial in the U. S. district court in this city, charged with aiding and abetting counterfeiters in the making of specie two weeks ago, has noted while the latter were imprisoned, went on the witness stand yesterday and occupied most of the time of the two sessions of court. He made a general denial of the charges against him, saying that he had been engaged as counsel for Arthur Taylor and Baldwin S. Brodell, the convicted counterfeiters in a regular manner. A large number of witnesses testified to Semple's good character.

SATURDAY, NOV. 23, 1901.

Mr. Carnegie is well off at Christmas time that he has already commenced to unload.

Mr. Lewis of Chicago is showing a disposition to keep quiet and count his money.

Frank James is going on the stage which is still much over than I have him in front of it.

For us, our old lead was consumed in the face of the fact that Congress is about to assemble.

Li Hung Chang is said to have had a curiosity that was actually consuming, and yet he lived to a ripe age.

Ragtime music is to be banished before the next World's Fair. St. Louis will have to invent something new.

Kitchener is still confident that he will ultimately not leave enough of the Boer army to hold a court of inquiry.

As a means of relief from his serious attack of rheumatism Mr. Crook might try wrapping himself in the tiger's skin.

Everything is quiet in China, except in the valley through which the royal family and retinue are foraging their way to Pekin.

Sales of diamonds have increased about 150 per cent this season, and are not far behind the average advance in price.

It is not absolutely certain how Alabama voted last Tuesday, but there can be no uncertainty about the adoption of the new constitution.

Miss Stone, the kidnapped American missionary, is likely to be converted into a political home of contention between Turkey and Bulgaria.

Home affairs will be more or less neglected at the coming session of congress in order that due attention may be given to our foreign relations.

The Gathmann gun test indicates that a large number of ships and men that have been destroyed in theory will, in practice, be permitted to survive.

If the defeated juglists are to be believed, the chance blow is responsible for about all the knockouts that occur.

There is nothing to detain Richard Croker if he feels like hurrying back to Wantage. His guidance in the selection of officials will no longer be needed.

The Indian has unquestionably regressed. But some of the white men from whom he has taken lessons in civilization were exceedingly poor teachers.

Notwithstanding the interdict, or imagined interdict, which has been pronounced by Russia against American products, Russia is a larger importer of American goods than ever before. This is the case with most of the European countries. The higher they raise their customs barriers against the United States goods the larger is the inflow of those articles. The German agrarians have discovered this fact to their sorrow.

It is easy to accept the reports that President Roosevelt will make no specific recommendations on the subject of reciprocity in his forthcoming message. Reciprocity is a vast subject. It is the biggest question which will come before congress in the approaching session. There are many sides to it. All of these sides require special study. Congress, by its committees and subcommittees, will go over this question carefully, and will probably formulate some scheme which will be satisfactory to the country.

An increase of twenty millions in bank deposits in Kansas since June 1 last certainly does not indicate that the people of that state have been impoverished by the drought. The deposits in the bank of the state now aggregate nearly $90,000,000, and they have been flowing in lately at an almost unprecedented rate. The condition of things seems to prove not only that the Kansas farmers have paid themselves with their big wheat crop for whatever they lost on the corn crop, but that the general loss from the deficiency in that crop is being seen on to the consumer, in the additional cost of his pork and other corn etc., instead of settling down on Mr. W. Whatever loss the state has caused has been, at any rate, widely distributed. The state is not a region which, as is once the case with the northern spring wheat belt, carries its eggs in one basket. It is a region of greatly diversified products and of a multiplicity of resources. The apparently imperious prosperity of Kansas under a single natural calamity is a gage of steady and successful development for the whole southwest.

TWO PERFORMANCES TODAY.

This Saturday afternoon and evening, the doors of Music Hall will swing wide open for the great scenic production of Lincoln C. Carter's Fast Mail. The railway has often been used by the dramatists, but never before to such an extent as in Carter's famous play, The Fast Mail. A freight train with 14 cars, a lighted caboose and a full-sized locomotive with engineer and fireman, crosses the stage in the most realistic and noisy manner, while later in the play a great Mississippi river steamboat, with bells and whistles and engines in full operation moves and explodes with rifle fire. The company is a most efficient one and there is great deal of fun to go with the sensational effects. A special car for the scenery and, and every detail is carefully looked to in stage production of today.

THE GREAT EVANGELINE.

The famous pantomimist the James S. Maitland was the originator of the character of the Lone Fisherman.

Evangeline, a character that appears in the history of stage scenes. The solitary angler is one in every scene, but he speaks a word, makes no sign that he aware of the proximity of any other person, yet, he plays an important part in the development of Mr. Ricard's famous and pretty story, and wins full share of the applause. Officers who saw Evangeline, during its recent long and very successful tour in Beston-de-lake that Mr. Charles Givens has really improved upon the lamented Maitland's impersonation of this quaint character, for, while preserving much of the original "stage business" of that famous artist, he has illuminated it so to speak, with up-to-date methods, and makes it much more diverting than ever before.

Local players will have an opportunity of witnessing this re-creation of Music Hall on Monday evening.

UNCLE TERRY.

James R. White, who plays the lovable old light house-keeper in Uncle Terry, dramatized from Charles Clark Abbott's novel of that name, tells of an exciting scene he recently witnessed in Waterbury, Conn. In the lobby of the hotel at which he was staying, said Mr. White, was a dusky little man with a loud voice who evidently wanted everyone to know what he was. He and a companion, who he said to his credit, seemed ashamed of the company he was in, stood in the hotel rotunda at night. The little fellow was talking about Ireland, and he said many bad things about the country and the people. A great big man stood near by listening to the little fellow's vapors. He merely smiled until the little fellow said in a very loud tone: "Show me an Irishman, and I'll show you a coward." Then the big fellow slipped up and touching the little fellow on the shoulder, said in a heavy bass voice: "What's that you said?" "I said show me an Irishman, and I'll show you a coward," said the little fellow whose knees were shaking under him. "Well, I am an Irishman," said the big fellow. "You are an Irishman? Well, and a smile of joy flitted over the little fellow's countenance as he saw a hole through which he could crawl. 'I'm a coward.'

WHY MISS JACKSON IS GREAT.

Leonora Jackson is great because in addition to her clear-cut perfect technique, and her broad, round, sympathetic tone, she is endowed with the power of making her voice heard with the greatest clearness and distinctness.

Such loveliness the gloomiest sheet,
Thy days so sad, thy news so brief,
I hail with joy, bright Autumn Leaf.

When the sweet summer flowers are dead,
And from their feasts, the bees have fled,
I grieve that autumn's shortest bough,
Is doomed to fade and die so soon.

Of hope and cheer, the flowers sing:
A joyful sphere of mirth they bring,
And like a careless, merry child,
I revel in their e'er rolls wild.

A CHRISTMAS FEATURE.

The Gathering of Trees is Now in Operation in the Woods.

The one feature of Christmas, which could not be well foregone without destroying the best traditions and losing sorrow to thousands, the Christmas tree, is having its day and the woods in the suburban districts are now the scene of much activity.

It is estimated that there are used in this country every year not less than 3,500,000 trees, and for nearly two months before the rest day in came farmers are busy selecting and setting the choicer they can find. The young firs are the favorites as they are slender, straighter and thicker than almost any other variety.

The farmer receives about 25 cents each for trees. There are five small ones to a bunch and 600 bunches make a carload.

Though the cutting, trimming, bundling and shipment of Christmas trees
is a laborious task, the Maine farmer, who do the work themselves make the season a holiday, taking their families to the forest fringe and eating their midday meal around a blazing fire that roars and sparkles in the midst of their labors.

One man cuts the steeple trees
close to the ground, a woman or a boy
two women put the trees into bunches and then tie them firmly together with strong cords, and a large boy or man drives the team of horses attached to a hayrack which hauls
the trees to the wharf or to the railroad station.

The price which farmers receive for their Christmas trees, though small, or individual trees, amounts to a modest sum when the large quantity is taken into consideration. For small ones, five or six feet tall, such trees could be used by families in moderate circumstances, five cents is the usual price.

A tree six to ten feet tall will bring from 10 to 15 cents, according to the market. The five cent trees are sold at 25 cents in the city markets, while 15 cent tree often brings a dollar or more, so the jobbers or retailers take handsome profits.

Until ten years ago the balsam fir of the cold northern woods was considered the most worthless tree that ever grew. It grew on land that could bear no other crop; no animal or bug would eat of its foliage and when it was once started in a deciduous, no other tree or shrub had a chance to come in and supplant it.
The wood was valueless for timber and made poor fuel. So far as commercial value went the fir was wholly worthless. Yet it was one of the first and most thrifty trees that grew, aving a dense foliage of living green and a shape that was as tapering and symmetrical as a monster spire.

Ten years ago a party of hunters returning on a steam yacht from a caravan hunt in Newfoundland called at Argentville on the eastern shore of Labrador Bay, and took a ride inland to visit some abandoned copper and lead mines in the Blue Hills. Stretching back from the roadside and sweeping over hill and valley were tens of thousands of young firs.

The owner of the yacht looked at them carefully, and came to the conclusion that they would make ideal Christmas trees, much better than the scrubby, irregular trees that were then in use. He hired some men and horses and loaded the deck of the yacht with about 500 trees and took them to Boston as a speculation.

When the cargo of trees were taken to Fenwick Hall the marketmen relied on one another in their greed to get new trees. They sold out the entire lot at an enormous profit and clamored for more. The next year about 9,000 trees were shipped to Boston.

pendence Nothing But Parchment.

Near the head of Gerrish Island and is a cosy little house, the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Grace, a couple who have passed many years of life together. On Thursday evening their friends and neighbors took possession of the house, and at the close of a pleasant social evening left behind many tokens of their affection and esteem.

On the same evening near Cutts Island bridge, in the new home of Mr.
and Mrs. J. P. Amee, who began their married life six years ago, was a family gathering. Refreshments were served by the hostess after an evening of pleasant conversation.

The First Christian church is being painted outside by J. E. Hoxie of Portsmouth. When the work is completed the church will be in good order inside and out and as comfortable as it is attractive. This work was made possible by the kind thoughtfulness of a member of the church, who is a successful business man in one of New England states. He holds in fond remembrance the church of his boy-hood and young manhood, where many of his family worshipped and his thoughts take substantial form.

The Christian Endeavor service on Friday evening was led by Mrs. P. D.
Grace. Thanksgiving was the subject and the meeting was one of interest.
Mr. Joseph Locke of Portsmouth is spending a few weeks with Mr.
and Mrs. Luther Lewis.

The family of John P. Brooks have moved from the Williams place on Gerrish Island to the house of W.

The family of Frank Davis have moved from their summer home into the house of Mrs. Mary J. West for the winter.

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Perry of New York will be interested to know that they are housekeeping in the city.

HANGING IN HIS BARN.

Body of Sylvester W. Perry Found by His Son After Life Had Been Extinct For a Day.

Contoocook, Nov. 23.—Sylvester W.
Perry, a prominent resident of Contoocook, committed suicide by hanging in his barn some time on Thursday, and the body was discovered on Sunday morning.

Mr. Perry was last seen about the village on Wednesday night. Friday evening his son came from Hillsboro on a visit. He found his father absent from the place, and being unable to locate him by the neighbors, started a search which resulted in the finding of the body.

Mr. Perry was a native and lifelong resident of the place. He was a veteran of the Civil war and a member of Col. Lull's post, G. A. R., of Hopkinton.

He was survived by a widow and two sons, Frank S. Perry of this city, Fred of Hillsboro, and a daughter,

Mrs. S. E. Merrill of Contoocook.

ANNEXATION FAVORED.

New York, Nov. 23.—Francisco
Jamil, president of the Cuban commission sent by the merchants, business men's and agricultural associations of Cuba to the United States with petitions for the improvement of the trade relations between the two countries, is stopping at the Hoffman House. When asked if it was his opinion that the United States should annex Cuba, he said:

"As a member of this commission, representing all classes and political parties of Cuba, I do not feel myself at liberty to express an individual opinion. But were you to say that 90 per cent. of the business people and property holders of Cuba favored annexation, you would be correct."

MODERN SURGERY SURPASSED.

"While suffering from a bad case of piles I consulted a physician who advised me to try a box of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve," says G. F. Carter, Atlanta, Ga. "I procured a box and was entirely cured. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is a splendid cure for piles, giving relief instantly, and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers."
Surgery is unnecessary to cure piles. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will cure any case. Cuts, burns, bruises and all other wounds are also quickly cured by it. Beware of counterfeits. At Philbrick's Pharmacy.

Rice Growing.

The growing of rice is regarded as the safest and surest cereal production, as it is also the most profitable, rice having the largest use and market of all the grains.

HONOLULU DWELLINGS.

Honolulu dwellings have a curious feature in the provision made for lighting
the exterior as well as the interior.
Electric lamps are set in the masonry of the walls, thereby throwing a reflection both inside and on the lawns, where the residents spend most of the nights.

Glass Cement.

A thick solution of marine glue dissolved in wood naphtha is said to make a good cement for glass. Have the glass perfectly clean of grease or soap, apply the cement, and when it becomes "tacky" bring the pieces of glass together.

Invigorating.

A cup of rock salt dissolved in a bath will prove as invigorating as a sea bath.

In Case of Fire.

In escaping from a fire creep or crawl along the floor, keeping the face as close to the floor as possible. As smoke ascends, there is a better chance of a current of air and consequently of breathing near the floor than elsewhere.

British America.

British America is about 300,000 square miles greater than the United States.

Frostbite.

In case of a frostbite rub the affected part with snow or mop gently with cold water. Do not go near the fire until the frozen part is restored to its natural color and texture. Stay in a cold room, protecting yourself by wearing warm wraps and drink hot coffee to keep from further chilling.

Savages Don't Stumble.

It is a remarkable fact that few savages have ever been known to stumble.

Gesture Language.

Far away from civilization gesture
language is still extant in Australia.
Some of the tribes possess such an excellent code that it is almost as efficient as the spoken language.

Furniture Glue.

A good furniture glue that does not harden and that has long been in use in the family from which the recipe it had is easily made. Dissolve five cents' worth of gelatin in five cents' worth of acetate of lead and coffee.

Spurious Caskets.

At Tarragona, Spain, the convicts in the penitentiary are engaged in making shoes, and practically the entire manufacture in that neighborhood is in their hands. The daily wage given them is from 12 to 15 cents, but the overlookers receive certain bounties and gratuities besides.

The Barber's Palaces.

In the twenty odd palaces of the German emperor 3,500 servants are employed, about 2,000 of these being women.

Turkey Food.

It has been ascertained by experiment that turkeys that get charcoal mixed with their food grow heavier than others, and their meat is more tender and better flavored.

Cleaning a Sponge.

When a sponge gets slimy and
"smells," soak it in milk twelve or fourteen hours. Wring it out and rinse thoroughly in a bowl of warm water in which a teaspoon her all the attention possible, and when she had finished I charged her for the whole amount. This of course made her very indignant, and she was highly offended, threatening to have me discharged, but after parleying for a while she paid her bill and left, we supposed, never to return again, but to our surprise she came back after staying away for several days, and we found her a much changed woman."—Pittsburgh Press.

Revival of Earrings.

Since Cleopatra's time and her magnificent pearl earring, which played such a prominent part in her life, or, rather, death, this particular piece of feminine jewelry has come in and gone out regularly with the tide of popularity. Just now earrings are considered quite the correct thing, though for 10 or 15 years they have scarcely been worn at all.

The "grown ups" of that period are probably prepared to welcome them as old friends. To the others it will be a new experience and means having the ears pierced. Jewelers have been predicting for the last two years the revival of this fashion, and there has been a marked tendency in its direction, and now it is generally admitted that earrings are positively to be worn.

It is understood, however, there are conditions that must be rigidly observed. Not any kind of earrings may be worn. In fact there is a limited number to choose from. The principal thing is that they must not swing.

Old earrings may be brought forth from their velvet resting places of many years and undergo inspection. If they would be converted into strictly modern ones, they may pay a visit to the jeweler and be reset.

Two settings are permissible, the screw and the French, this latter a combination of the screw and the old fashioned "drop," but without the swing. Another thing prohibited is the single diamond, once elegantly styled a "solitaire." Pearls and turquoises, alone or set round with diamonds, are all you have to select from if you confine yourself to the earrings of fashion. Of course pearls, lustrous and of fairly good size, are favorites. These are rare and expensive enough to be much desired by smart women.

A Mean Feminine Trick.

This edifying conversation was heard on a Norristown train. The two girls were rather pretty, and one of them carried a novel from the free library.

First Girl—So your engagement is broken off?

Second Girl—Yes, I broke it off last Wednesday night.

First Girl—But you still have that beautiful ring? Didn't he expect you to return it to him?

Second Girl—I suppose he did, but I got around that matter splendidly. I have half a mind to tell you all about it.

First Girl—Oh, yes; do tell me!

Second Girl—Well, I will. You see, I knew I should throw him over on Wednesday night, so that afternoon I bought from a fakir on Eighth street a 10 cent ring that resembled this one considerably. We were sitting on the front porch and, just as I had hoped, we had a dreadful quarrel.

To bear her away from it all for a little while into the open, happy as a lark. No coachman to impair the beautiful vision, and all without the strict code of decorum. Happy cycle, did it ever come to your inventor how much benefit he had given womankind?

How has the schoolteacher been beguiled by the cycle? Battling day by day in the never-destroying occupation of expanding twigs or more young buds of promise into flower and fruit of the future, trying to place each in soft suitable for noble development, does she need recreation? Who more?

There is the ever ready friend awaiting her pleasure to carry her off to new scenes and places, to smooth the raffled mind and give her fresh inspiration and courage—Mrs. Clara Jamison in American Queen.

Trials of a Waitress.

In conversing with a young woman in one of our leading restaurants the other day she said that no one has any idea of how they are oftentimes regarded by persons who come there to be served. They are treated with utmost courtesy and in a most thoughtful manner. She related an incident which occurred a short time ago to illustrate one of the many things they are called upon to contend with.

A woman, she said, who was in the habit of coming there regularly would order her dishes changed three or four times before she was satisfied, each time making an excuse that it was not what she wanted, and she became so noted that none of the waitresses cared to wait on her. It happened that her turn came, and she, being a bright young woman, as many of the women in restaurants are, determined it possible to devise some plan by which to break her of this habit. It happened that she ordered roast beef, and after cutting it in two, notwithstanding the fact that it was a prime cut, she again ordered it returned, with the excuse that it was not as well done as she liked it. She seemed to delight in putting the waitress to as much trouble as possible, and she was not slow to see it.

This is what she said: "Some people are never satisfied unless they can make life hard for some one, and in no place is this more apparent than in a restaurant. I determined to punish her if possible, knowing it was at the expense of losing her custom for the house, but this I did not think would make much difference, as she was only a loss to the business at any rate, and besides I was carrying out one of the rules by doing so. I took back the roast beef and ordered two other dishes before she was satisfied. The worst of the matter was that she would order the girls around as if they were very inferior to her and must therefore give

WOMAN'S WORLD.

FRAU WAGNER, WHO BURIED HER HAIR IN HER HUSBAND'S GRAVE.

Housekeeping as a Science—Benefits From the Bicycle—Trials of a Waitress—Revival of Earrings—A Mean Feminine Trick.

Fran Cosima Wagner, widow of the great Richard Wagner and one of the most efficient generals in Europe as far as operatic matters are concerned, has suffered her first rebuff in years.

The Prussian government has refused to sanction the passage of the copyright bill which would have made possible the extension for a certain number of years of the ownership by Wagner's heirs of the copyright privileges of his opera "Parsifal." This opera, as the rest of the musical world knows to its vexation, is now performed only at Bayreuth. The valuable copyright which protects it will, however, be come invalid in 1913, at which date all of the great composer's works become public property. Anticipating this dire event, Frau Cosima and Herr Siegfried Wagner, her son, made this bold attempt to retain their exclusive right and failed.

To understand Frau Wagner's chagrin at this failure it is necessary to recall her almost fanatical devotion both Benefits From the Bicycle.

There has been no greater blessing given to women of the present day for the benefit of health and happiness than the cycle, properly used. To the woman compelled to earn her own living and that of others shut up in office, shop and factory it has given the opportunity to get away from the treadmill of everyday life and seek health and happiness in God's pure air and green fields, returning refreshed in mind and body, better able to meet the conditions of life placed upon her.

And what an opportunity the cycle has presented to the mother. Only we who have the care of a family can fully appreciate the benefit of a spin in the glorious morning air, if it be of only 20 minutes' duration—how it quietes the nerves and sends the glow of health to the cheek and the bright sparkle to the eye—returning home to enter on the duties of the day glad at heart and making every one else so.

And our suburban sister, how has she been benefited by the cycle? It has revolutionized her life. It has been the means of keeping her in touch with her sister. In the city, it has carried her into the shopping district and given her the advantage of exercise which she could not get by car and carriage travel. It also brings her city company to her home, and many happy, joyous hours are spent in each other's company that in days gone by were sad and lonely. So the cycle is a boon of boons to suburbanites.

And our society sister, burdened by her exacting duties, what refuge to fly to? To bear her away from it all for a little while into the open, happy as a lark. No coachman to impair the beautiful vision, and all without the strict code of decorum. Happy cycle, did it ever come to your inventor how much benefit he had given womankind?

How has the schoolteacher been beguiled by the cycle? Battling day by day in the never-destroying occupation of expanding twigs or more young buds of promise into flower and fruit of the future, trying to place each in soft suitable for noble development, does she need recreation? Who more?

There is the ever ready friend awaiting her pleasure to carry her off to new scenes and places, to smooth the raffled mind and give her fresh inspiration and courage—Mrs. Clara Jamison in American Queen.

Trials of a Waitress.

In conversing with a young woman in one of our leading restaurants the other day she said that no one has any idea of how they are oftentimes regarded by persons who come there to be served. They are treated with utmost courtesy and in a most thoughtful manner.

She related an incident which occurred a short time ago to illustrate one of the many things they are called upon to contend with.

A woman, she said, who was in the habit of coming there regularly would order her dishes changed three or four times before she was satisfied, each time making an excuse that it was not what she wanted, and she became so noted that none of the waitresses cared to wait on her. It happened that her turn came, and she, being a bright young woman, as many of the women in restaurants are, determined it possible to devise some plan by which to break her of this habit.

It happened that she ordered roast beef, and after cutting it in two, notwithstanding the fact that it was a prime cut, she again ordered it returned, with the excuse that it was not as well done as she liked it. She seemed to delight in putting the waitress to as much trouble as possible, and she was not slow to see it.

This is what she said: "Some people are never satisfied unless they can make life hard for some one, and in no place is this more apparent than in a restaurant. I determined to punish her if possible, knowing it was at the expense of losing her custom for the house, but this I did not think would make much difference, as she was only a loss to the business at any rate, and besides I was carrying out one of the rules by doing so. I took back the roast beef and ordered two other dishes before she was satisfied. BIRTHDAY PARTY.

On Friday evening a number of the young friends of George Miles were most pleasantly entertained at his home, in honor of his birthday. The time was most delightful with music, games, etc. The evening Master George was presented with a nail leg by the young friends of the company, which was a contribution to the entertainment.

Incidentally the lecturer touched upon the evils which have been made upon the "withholding of the cup from the laity" in the communion. From the earliest time, he said, it had been the custom to give the communion to the sick and some others in but the one species—namely, the bread alone—and the charge that it was the universal practice to give the communion in both kinds up to the thirteenth century or any other time was untrue. The decision of the
